About ResTech:

Hi,

I'm David – founder and CEO of ResTech Solutions in Houston, Texas.

I launched ResTech in 2011 to help people and small businesses with their technology needs. Many of our business functions today rely on technology because when it works, it can make our lives simpler and our companies more efficient. That's why using the latest devices, software, applications, and beyond has become a competitive advantage for many companies worldwide.

Having an in-house IT department to ensure that your tech is always working is very expensive, and that is where I want ResTech to come in. We provide those same advantages and capabilities that large corporations have to you and your small business at an affordable price point so that you, too, can run more efficiently and have a competitive advantage in your marketplace.

Although my work revolves around technology, I prefer to work with people. That's why I create tech solutions through set or customized packages tailored to clients' needs, offering a more simple human experience so that people can do what they do better. When technology works, we can all thrive, drive progress, and place our faith in the people that we interact with every day.

I look forward to working with you and growing together.

About David Levine:

David Levine is a third-generation native Houstonian and the founder of ResTech Solutions, established in 2011.

David fostered an entrepreneurial spirit and drive to start his own company while growing up around his family's business. A man with an affinity for science, technology, and problem-solving, he earned his Bachelor of Science in Wireless Engineering from Auburn University in 2010 and his MBA from the University of Houston in 2013, attending graduate courses while running ResTech in its early stages.

Today, David and the ResTech team fill the need for an in-house IT management department for small to medium-sized businesses without breaking their budget. He believes businesses of all sizes should have access to reliable, quality IT services because technology is at the core of most company models today more than ever before.

With over 15 years of professional experience in IT, David works directly with business owners across all industries to find weaknesses in their cybersecurity systems, get to the root of their IT problems, and establish adaptable goals moving forward. While David truly is a tech-savvy lifesaver at heart, he also values working with people and creating human-to-human experiences that develop into trusting partnerships.

Outside of the office, David enjoys continuing his education in IT and teaching others how to use technology to their advantage. David is also an esteemed Eagle Scout of the Boy Scouts of America.
